SUPRA Supervisor of the Year Awards aim to promote, recognise and reward excellence in higher degree research supervision at the University of Sydney as nominated and judged by research postgraduates at the University.

We honour supervisors of master's by research, PhD, and other doctoral candidates. Nominees and students are invited to the awards night in October or November when winners are announced.

Eligibility

- Your research supervisor or co-supervisor supervised you for at least a whole year of your candidature, and you are currently enrolled, or your degree was awarded no earlier than in 2021.
- Nomination is for an individual supervisor only.
- Nominations must be seconded by another doctoral or master's by research student who had the same supervisor.
- A student may nominate only one supervisor, but may second a nomination made by another student.
- Previous nominees are eligible for this year's awards.

Criteria

Nominees will be assessed on the basis of the information provided on the nomination form and against the following criteria:

- positive and constructive relationship with students
- assistance with research and support for research career of students
- knowledge of the field of research.
